IN THE AZORES, ATLANTIC

May 12, 1614,
in the morning

"Have you lost your courage, Captain? Are you getting old?" the young pirate jeers cockily. Captain Boyers is left speechless for a moment. He has been at sea for nearly 30 years and owns a letter of marque issued by the British Crown. But the firebrand gets muted approval from the crew. They dislike forfeiting a big catch such as the Santa Clara.

You ensure that Captain Boyers

- A) aims his pistol at the impertinent worm and pulls the trigger,
- B) gives the order to load the guns,
- C) commands the crew to prepare for boarding.

"You always want to play treasure hunt! Digging up useless junk and claiming it's valuable. But I don't want to play that anymore!" the little girl complains to her playmate.

"Let's play house instead. We could get married today!" she suggests excitedly.

You ensure that the boy

- A) hesitantly agrees to tie the knot,
- B) runs home with his treasures and reads a book in his room,
- C) defiantly continues digging on his own, hoping to strike gold.

Tenderly, the young man whispers something into her ear and retrieves a velvet-covered box from behind his back. Cynthia's heart is beating fast while she opens it. The con- tents leaves her speechless. She looks to her boyfriend who is waiting expectantly. "Oh, sweetheart..." she whispers.

You ensure that Cynthia

- A) flings her arms around his neck and kisses him with abandon,
- B) admires herself in the mirror with the contents of the box,
- C) has doubts and asks him to return the gift.

“Why, Peter? Why?” John wonders and shakes his head in disbelief. Several things are much clearer now, but not Peter’s motivation. Was it about money? Or did Peter want to put one over on him? Was Cynthia behind the matter? Why Peter just dumped his promising career remains a mystery to John.

Suddenly, John has an idea how to use the situation to his advantage.

You ensure that John

- A) turns to the police with his suspicion,
- B) confronts Peter,
- C) forces more thefts on Peter.

Peter calms his breath and follows the diver into the wreck. He draws ever closer to his former boss without being noticed. The feeling of betrayal reemerges along with his thoughts of that time.

He has an outrageous idea... Peter shakes in anger, pulls his knife and cuts the other diver's air hose creating a burst of air bubbles.

Horried, Peter stares at what he has done.

You ensure that Peter

A) offers his rival his air supply,

B) flees undetected,

C) stabs him, to ensure that he is not betrayed a second time.

"Just one last..." Robinson Crusoe slurs with a whine. While pouring, the bartender wonders how his regular is even able to pay for the constant drinking. And always the endless rambling about his great find. One he isn't allowed to tell anyone about.

Suddenly, tears well up in the eyes of the scruffy guest, as many times before. "Today! Today, I'll finish it," he whimpers into his glass. "I'll take a boat and bury that damn stuff." Then, he raises his glass. "One last sip to an old friend! Rest in peace."

You ensure that the bartender

- A) pours Robinson a generous refill,
- B) takes time for a conversation,
- C) throws the drunkard out.

Gregor checks his toolbox for the proper screwdriver, when someone disturbs his repairs. "Come on over for a moment, Gregor... We'll never be that young again. At least I won't!" With a smirk, the owner of another boat anchored a few berths away offers him a can of beer. Gregor looks up from his work and thinks.

You ensure that Gregor

- A) checks his boat for a gift and joins the party,
- B) finishes the repair of his radio set and goes to the party afterwards,
- C) doesn't go to the party and instead checks his harpoon for tomorrow's fielding.

Circumstances of Death

SOMEWHERE IN THE NORTH ATLANTIC

July 16, 2011,
9:59 am

A leaking sailboat stuck on the reef below...
A hopeless glance across the infinite sea...
Water everywhere, but nothing to quench his thirst. He forces a grating laugh from his parched throat. Is this the end?

A moment of thought...

Then a determined kick to dislodge the chest...

A moment of weightlessness...

A jolt and the noose tightens and darkness immediately steals over him...

At last, a plan has worked the way it was supposed to.

Har, har...

Little Peter likes pirate stories about fights for treasure and pretty women.

Yesterday, Peter was a promising student and friend of Professor Dr. John Milovic.
Today, it became obvious that he stole an ancient piece of jewelry.

The Spanish ship is on a return trip from Peru. It almost certainly has valuable goods
aboard.

The box contains an antique necklace. Cynthia is certain that her suitor didn't buy it at a jeweler.

The staff gave him that nickname for his unkempt appearance and strange adventure stories. Originally, his name was Peter.

At first, his boss had brushed Peter's theories aside as absurd. Then, he used the criminal charge to look for the treasure without Peter.

The chest is centuries-old.
The valuable contents has been spilled all over the boat in anger. A unused shovel is lying next to it.

*Now, continue reading
the manual.*

Gregor is a man in his mid-fifties from Germany and travels alone. He will report his boat
as stolen the next day.
