

8 Careers in Criminal Justice for Degree Holders to Consider

A criminology degree provides access to a wide range of employment possibilities. The advantage of obtaining this certificate is that it gives you access to a variety of employment options if you wish to work in this industry. Here are a few positions that, given your background and professional aspirations, would be a perfect fit for you.

Major Corrections

Your education will centre on prison life if you choose to major in corrections, preparing you for a career working in jails and prisons. You will study about crisis response, legal systems, and prisoner rights, among other things. After graduation, the majority of majors begin their careers in penal facilities. But by concentrating on research, you can also pursue scholarly work in this field.

Criminology Major

Your academic life will center on the causes and nature of crime when you pursue an online criminal justice degree as criminology major. The criminal justice system and criminal behavior will also be covered. You will learn how to evaluate case studies and comprehend crime theory during your course. Additionally, you will learn more about how criminal law and policy operate. Once you're done, you can use what you've learned to work in sociology or psychology-related fields.

Forensic Science Major

You can perform crime scene investigations thanks to your degree. You will gain knowledge in cybersecurity, forensic analysis, and computer forensics investigation. Your critical thinking, problem-solving, and attention to detail will improve.

Police Science Major

You will discover what it takes to be a police officer as a student. You will hone your talents in investigating crimes, follow protocol to respond to risky circumstances, and develop interpersonal communication skills. A master's degree or other advanced degrees are also options. Some enroll in classes that will prepare them to work as private investigators. The same route is available to you.

Pre-Law and Legal Major

Your criminal justice degree can be used as a pre-law course. You will need to strengthen the abilities you'll need as a paralegal and lawyer for that. By pursuing a pre-law degree, you have plenty of possibilities to learn about laws and the theories behind them. You can also study the justice system, comprehend how enforcement agencies work, and how the judicial system operates.

Criminal Justice Major

Your degree can also qualify you for bachelor's degrees for private investigators and paralegals since both are considered as criminal justice areas. If you are interested in these sectors, a criminal justice degree can provide the firm foundation you need to join these industries.

Sociology Major

When you major in sociology, you study social systems and society. Your curriculum might initially have a criminal justice focus before switching to a sociological focus. This can assist you in locating employment in a variety of industries, including human services, public services, and rehabilitation services.

Criminal Psychology Major

If you love watching criminal profilers on TV work, that's part of what you will do as a criminal psychology major. You focus on human behavior theories interpret criminal activity and behavior, and more.

Contact

Company Name: Montreat College

Address: 310 Gaither Circle

Contact No: 828-669-8012

Website: <https://www.montreat.edu/>

Email Id: admissions@montreat.edu

Thank You