Dear Lukasz

Thank you for coming to our offices to explain the work of Trustedoctor.

Brain Tumour Support aims to provide all individuals and their families with a complete support service, at any point from diagnosis, and for as long as it is needed, so they do not feel alone and have emotional, practical and informative help in a local and national capacity.

We are here to support not just patients themselves but also their families, carers and loved ones who are dealing day to day with the impact of any type of brain tumour.

We provide individualised, specialist information, practical guidance and emotional and psychological support to help cope with the challenges faced.

Our aim is to design support around you, so our support service is driven by what patients and families have told us they need.

We offer an initial assessment to establish what support needs are, a support based plan through ourselves and other charities and organisations that we work closely with, and regular reviews of your support needs as and when you want them.

We run regular support groups in 15 areas across the South West and the Midlands. We also run smaller social events as larger groups are not for everyone and our 'Out and About Groups' meet these needs.

Our professional and confidential counselling service is available to patients and families as an addition to our one to one support. We work in partnership with Macmillan as well as very closely with many organisations including the NHS, Carers Associations, NeuroAlliance, Brainwaves, Headway, International Brain Tumour Alliance (IBTA), Maggie's Centres, Hospices, Cancer User Groups, Information Centres, and Cancer Campaigning Group.

Yours sincerely
